

3.5 CONCLUSIONS

Introducing the damping terms into the wiggler field equations shows that the y component of the magnetic wiggler field is unaffected by the damping. The x component experiences less damping due to the influence of the initial static magnetic field. The damping curves show that as the strength of the static magnetic field is increased, the damping is reduced. The damping is also reduced by increasing the plasma frequency.